1820	The first person sees the Antarctic.	Captain Thaddeus Bellingshausen
	The first person reaches the South Pole.
	The first person flies to the South Pole.
	The first person born in the Antarctic.

People have lived in the Arctic for thousands of years but we've known about the Antarctic for only two hundred years. The first person to see the Antarctic was a captain on a Russian ship, Thaddeus Bellingshausen, in 1820. There were many expeditions to the Antarctic in the nineteenth century but it was a difficult place to visit. Nobody reached the South Pole until the twentieth century. In 1911 a British expedition and an expedition from Norway raced each other to the South Pole. Roald Amundsen and his Norwegian team arrived on December 14th. A month later the British, led by Robert Scott, also reached the South Pole but the team died on the return journey. Eighteen years later Richard E Byrd, an American, flew to the South Pole and back. In 1978 the first child, an Argentinian called Emilio Marcos Palma, was born in the Antarctic. Even today the Antarctic has many visitors but nobody lives there all the time.

5 Read Exercise 4 again. Write True or False.

- 1 Nobody saw the Arctic before 1820.
- 2 The first person to see the Antarctic was on a Russian boat.
- 3 There weren't any expeditions to the Antarctic in the 19th century.
- 4 The British and the Norwegians raced to the South Pole in 1911.
- 5 The first person to fly to the South Pole was Argentinian.
- 6 Thousands of people live in the Antarctic.
