HOW TO HAVE A HEALTHY RELATIONSHIP

Read the tips. Then match the headings (a-f) with the tips (1-6)

1.

Even if you've been together for a long time, you should plan activities with your partner, which are essential. You ought to set aside one evening each week to be your designated "date night" and think of fun things to do that you'll both enjoy. It's okay to spend some evenings lounging at home, but you should also make sure to do things that take you out on the town!

2.

You should explain each boundary or expectation to your partner and get verbal confirmation that they understand and will respect each one. Defining such limits should prevent conflict, and you ought to have a basis for discussion if someone crosses the line. Boundaries could be personal, social, or financial. For example, you should explain to your partner that you value quality time with them, but you need at least one night a week to spend with friends.

a) Spend quality time with one another.

b) Be open to change.

c) Try new things and surprise each other.

d) Set expectations and boundaries.

e) Apologize and forgive one another.

f) Nurture outside relationships with friends and family.

Keeping up with other relationships should help you maintain your identity. Being in a relationship doesn't mean you're permanently glued to your partner! You should balance your time spent together with time spent apart; go out with your friends, spend time with family, and engage with your personal hobbies. You ought to also encourage your partner to do the same! So, the time you spend together is much more precious.

HOW TO HAVE A HEALTHY RELATIONSHIP

4.

Relationships can become routine quickly, so you ought to keep the spark going by thinking of fun and creative ways to surprise your partner. You should spring a small gift or romantic activity on them or bring them on a spur-of-the-moment overnight getaway. You should do something neither of you has ever tried to keep both of you engaged and entertained.

5.

Mutual growth and change are surefire signs of a healthy relationship. Change happens as a natural part of life, and relationships evolve too. You should view each obstacle or major change as a chance to strengthen your relationship with your partner, and you oughtn't to let your fears hold you back. You should embrace change and focus on growing with your partner during your relationship's ups and downs.

a) Spend quality time with one another.

b) Be open to change.

c) Try new things and surprise each other.

d) Set expectations and boundaries.

e) Apologize and forgive one another.

f) Nurture outside relationships with friends and family.

You should recognize when you're in the wrong and apologize to your partner. Be specific; acknowledge your mistake and how it made your partner feel while explaining how you plan to fix things. If both of you have done something hurtful, taking the first step should also make it easier for your partner to follow suit and apologize, too.

LET'S TALK

Discuss the questions with your partner.

Share a story that you find interesting of how you (your friends/parents/celebrities/etc) first met.

What things make you understand that the couple you see is well-matched?

How do you understand the phrase from the video 'Happy wife, happy life'? And do you agree with it?

Do you believe that people can or have to change in their relationships?

LET'S PLAY ALIAS

Read the rules and play in teams or player VS player.

You will see a card with 5 words. The task is to explain as many words as possible in 1 minute. You can play individually and explain the words to everyone or in teams, where you explain the words to your team. Get a point for every guessed word.

The teacher can use a timer. The player or team with the most points at the end of the game wins! The cards can be sent to the players privately before the game or the players can turn away from their screens and let one player see and explain the card.
